BIOMEDICAL SEARCHES

The unique challenges of biomedical searching lie not only in the myriad types of literature resources that exist, but also in the multiple roles and areas of focus the information must support.

Effective biomedical research spans vast databases of scientific literature and business information to provide pertinent, decision-driving information to internal teams ranging from R&D and Regulatory Support, to Medical Communications and Post-marketing Surveillance. From FDA/EMEA searches, to business and competitor intelligence and analysis, our biomedical team is both well-equipped and highly-committed to offering the most comprehensive suite of search and consulting services in the industry.

Our biomedical search experts have first-hand experience in the industries we serve. Our team is comprised of top-of-their-field information scientists, each with relevant BS or PhD degrees and over 10 years of searching experience at leading biotech and pharmaceutical companies. That means they ask the right questions when defining the scope of your unique search. It also means they're better able to navigate the wide range of medical and business resources, and databases with in-depth indexing, to derive the most relevant information.

And because we truly understand the needs of our clients, our searches never end with a simple "data-dump" of search results. Instead, we provide results that have been analyzed, refined and formatted to your specific needs.

Simply put, we offer you more than information – we offer you insight.

In the competitive and highly regulated world of pharmaceuticals, knowledge is both your greatest asset and your greatest challenge. Rely on the search team that understands your industry from the inside, and brings the essential mix of scientific knowledge, subject matter expertise, and hands-on experience to every search.
